THE NAVY REPORT.

The report of the Secretary of the Navy, the material portion of which we are enabled to print this morning, is a document of great public interest. Being the concluding report of the four years Executive term, Mr. Welles has given a general view of the operations of his Department, which enables the people to measure the success or failure of his efforts by the means placed at his disposal, and by the amount at work required at his hands. We think it must be admitted by candid men that the building up of the American navy to its present standard of 671 vessels, mounting 4,610 guns, of an aggregate burthen of 510,396 tons, upon an average expenditure of $73,000,000 of currency per annum for all the disbursements of the Department, has been a very great achievement, not suffering by comparison with every other work that the Government and people have set their hands to since the beginning of the war. We have expressed, as we believe the public have felt, some impatience at the failures of the blockade at Wilmington. The Secretary sets forth the reasons why the blockade has not proved so efficient as could be desired at that point, and we commend our readers to give them a careful perusal. Sixty-seven steamers, we are informed, have been captured or destroyed while seeking to enter or depart from that port, which is now the only point on the Atlantic coast not effectually sealed up. The amount of prize money distributed since the beginning of the war is about $14,000,000—the portion coming to the Government being invested in interest-bearing securities, and furnishing an income more than sufficient to meet all demands on the naval pension fund. Mr. Welles refers to the capture of the Florida and her subsequent loss in Hampton Roads, without comment, leaving the question of the right or wrong of the business to be discussed and adjusted elsewhere. He urges the erection of the rank of Vice Admiral as a reward for the brilliant services of Admiral Farragut, in which recommendation we join. He closes with a heartfelt tribute to the officers and seamen of the navy for their valor and devotion in the service of their country. The report is well written, and the subjects treated are of universal interest. We trust no one will be deterred from reading it by reason of its length.

THE CIVILIZATION OF ENGLAND.

We print elsewhere the shocking details of the execution of Muller, at London, and the still more fearful scenes that transpired about the scaffold on that occasion. With the particulars of the murder, the flight of the doomed man, his capture at New York, his transportation to England, and his trial, our readers are familiar. He was sentenced to be executed on Monday, Nov. 15, at Newgate. All Sunday night the gin houses in the vicinity swarmed with the scum of London, and thousands of people gathered to witness the sublime moral spectacle, and resolutely held their places in spite of the falling rain, that they might have an advantageous position. Dawn broke upon a motley crowd. One hundred thousand old men, lads, women, children and infants, gathered together to see a fellow-being launched into eternity; blackguards of tender years; thieves and their mistresses; dandies with cane and cigar; sleek familiar family parties with their luncheon; tradesmen, noblemen and members of Parliament; pickpockets, street walkers, garroters and prize fighters; preachers, peers, mechanics and gentlemen: brawling prostitutes, mothers of families, serving girls, girls and babies all edified alike, all exhibiting that hidden, morbid lust for blood which is one of the most frightful phases of poor human nature and all reveling in the moral debauchery of the gallows that is more exciting than wine, more terrible than the gaming table.

This was the crowd, and how did they spend their time until the hangman claimed his victim? Women and girls swilling beer and filling the air with ribaldry and obscene ballads; pickpockets rifling tradesmen of their money; hundreds of men garroted and robbed in the open daylight; thieves and courtezans plying their vocations with utter impunity; bullies and prize-fighters pummeling each other to jellies for the edification of women and children; preachers distributing tracts, and ballad-mongers filthy songs, side by side with gentlemen and gentlewomen exciting over the pleasures of the people; drunkenness, obscenity, blasphemy, robbery, pugilism, garrotings,—these were the sports of the English people until the hour when the solemn bell announced that the victim was to undergo the sentence of death. He is led out, and in a momentary silence in the crowd. A clergyman is at his side, and in a series of cross-questions which would better have befitted a Tombs lawyer, evokes a dubious confession of guilt from him. The wretched man has not finished his statement, but the hangman and the crowd are in haste, and it is driven into eternity before the clergyman can catch his concluding words. The clergyman hurries off. His work is ended. The hangman, his ghastly office concluded, slinks away amid hisses and jeers and obscene questions, and there is nothing left but the black frame and the corpse and the crowd. They have gratified their brutal curiosity with the brutal sight; and the rioting, the fighting, the gambling, the garroting, the blaspheming, the drinking, and all the horrible debauchery of the flesh-Japan crew commence anew.

We are not writing of the days of Philip or Burgundy, when such crowds gathered to see beggars lashed at cart-tails by hangmen, women drowned in the Seine, and men broken at the wheel, for stealing; nor of the days of Robespierre, when les citoyennes and their dames flocked, to see the blood flow from the guillotine, but of a great moral feast set forth by the English Government for its people! a day's sport for the constituents of My Lord Mayor of London! a sublime spectacle for women and babes! This was in London, the metropolis of the world, the vaunted center of commerce, learning, morality and religion, the focus of the world's civilization—not in Dahomey, where the King may slaughter so many each year, nor in China, where rebels are torn to pieces with wire brushes. They are barbarians, and but little better could be expected of them. It was England, the mistress of civilization, that can rival China and Dahomey, that permits such spectacles, whose noblemen and working men crowd to hangings, prize fights, and prize fights and hangings. The nation that can suffer such spectacles as the hanging of Muller is eminently capable of siding with rebels and traitors to free government, and should hereafter keep at least a respectful silence when civilization is concerned.

☞ In speaking of the project of arming the slaves at the South, the London Times recently remarks: "The South has no reason to doubt that the negro will fight just as bravely in support of the cause of slavery, which is the cause of his master, as he will in the cause of liberty." And it adds of its particular friends the rebels: "The man who would submit without a murmur to the imprisonment of his horses or his crops, may very likely shrink back with a species of superstitious horror from the attempt of his own Government (at Richmond) to deprive him of those very slaves for whom he has already fought a long and desperate war."

The Times confesses that this insurrection is an effort to "wrong" them, and the paper whose asserted pride it is to defend "fair play"—the representative of the aristocratic governing class of England—deliberately supports as a manly assertion of an undoubted right the armed effort of a body of men to overthrow a Government, which they do not pretend has wronged them, merely for the sake of preserving slavery. Does any really intelligent and thoughtful Englishman wonder that his country is detested by all other nations when he sees that its leading journal, holding a position which no other paper needs in any other country, is guilty of such a crime against human nature and civil society?

☞ Several Boston newspapers, whose compositors are on a strike, have received help from very unexpected sources. In the Traveler office, five clergymen—one a Methodist and the others a Universalist—are working by at case, "having volunteered their services to pull the paper through this trouble." In the Herald office the proprietor assumed the entire labor of the editorial department, while his editors and reporters set type. A printer in one of the courts took a message from the editors of the Journal that he was ready to send proof or to work in any other position where his labor could be made available. The cashier in one of the leading banks in Boston offers "to go without his paper for a month, and pay for it, too," to help the newspaper proprietors. Two or three members of the Boston bar, who formerly handled the "sticks and rule," have also reported themselves ready for duty, if it shall be necessary to call upon them.

☞ OFFICIAL VOTE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE.—The Governor and Council have completed the count of the Presidential vote of New Hampshire, which is officially reported as follows:

	Lincoln.	McClellan.
Home vote	34,529	28,350
Soldiers' vote	3,018	871
Total	36,459	29,221

Lincoln's majority on Home vote, 2,179; Lincoln's majority on Soldiers' vote, 1,347. Total majority, 7,238.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Fellow-citizens of the Senate and House of Representatives:

Again the blessings of health and abundant harvests claim our profoundest gratitude to Almighty God.

The condition of our foreign affairs is reasonably satisfactory.

RELATIONS WITH MEXICO.

Mexico continues to be the theatre of civil war. While our political relations with that country have undergone no change, we have at the same time strictly maintained neutrality between the belligerents.

THE INTER-OCEANIC TRANSIT ROUTE.

At the request of the States of Costa Rica and Nicaragua, a competent engineer has been authorized to make a survey of the river San Juan and the port of San Juan. It is a source of much satisfaction that the difficulties which for a moment excited some political apprehensions, and caused a losing of the inter-oceanic transit route, have been amicably adjusted, and that there is a good prospect that the route will soon be re-opened, with an increase of capacity and adaptation. We could not exaggerate either the commercial or the political importance of that great improvement.

RELATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES OF COLUMBIA.

It would be doing injustice to an important South American State, not to acknowledge the directness, frankness and cordiality with which the United States of Columbia have entered into intimate relations with this Government. A Claims Convention has been constituted to compile the unfinished work of the one which closed its session in 1861. The new liberal Constitution of Venezuela having gone into force, the Fifth and Sixteenth Conference of the people, the Government under it has been recognized, and diplomatic intercourse will be at once opened in a cordial and friendly spirit. The long deferred Axis Island claim has been satisfactorily paid and discharged. Mutual complaints have been made in the claims awarded by the late joint commission for the settlement of claims between the United States and Peru. An earnest and candid effort is now being made to exist between the two countries, and such efforts as were in my power have been used to remove misunderstanding and avert a threatened war between Peru and Spain.

RELATIONS WITH SOUTH AMERICAN STATES.

Our relations are of the most friendly nature with Chili, the Argentine Republic, Bolivia, Costa Rica, Paraguay, San Salvador and Hayti. During the past year no differences of any kind have arisen with any of these Republics, and on the other hand their sympathies with the United States are constantly expressed.

The claim arising from the seizure of the cargo of the brig Macedonian in 1821 has been paid in full by the Government of Chili.

Civil war continues in the Spanish port of San Domingo, apparently without a prospect of an early close.

PROGRESS OF LIBERIA.

Official correspondence has been freely opened with Liberia, and it gives us a pleasing view of the social and political progress in that Republic. It may be expected to derive new impulse from American influence, improved by the rapid disappearance of slavery in the country, and it is hoped that the nations will be induced to follow the example which the United States has given in acknowledging the independence of an early ally.

NAVY DEPARTMENT, Dec. 5, 1864.

SIR—In submitting the annual report of the transactions of the Department and of the navy, with those of the several bureaus for the year, it affords me pleasure to assure you that the condition of affairs is satisfactory, and that the discipline and efficiency of the service continue to be habitually maintained. After many years of peace and consparative inactive service, the officers and seamen of our navy were suddenly called to the performance of extraordinary and exacting duties, and during nearly four years of unprecedented labors they have manifested their attachment to the Union and their fidelity to the national flag by rigidly enforcing a difficult and delicate blockade, by vigilantly patrolling the great national rivers of the interior, and by a succession of ocean and coastwise expeditions, achievements which have not only added to our naval renown but greatly promoted our national security and strength.

When the change of administration took place in March, 1861, the war had already been virtually begun—the forts, and arsenals, and custom houses and mints, and navy yards, and national property within the rebel States had been seized without resistance. The capture of Fort Sumter soon revealed its inability to assert the national authority, and its disinclination to vindicate the national supremacy, and closed its ports, and that of the thirty-sixth Congress, without any preparatory measures for the commissions conferred which was even then shaking the Union to its foundation and threatening our existence as a nation.

In six weeks after I had entered upon the administration of this department, a blockade, extending over more than three thousand five hundred miles of our coast, was established, and in this stupendous work, pronounced to be impracticable by the highest foreign authorities, we had a fleet, navy, reduced to the lowest peace establishment, composed largely of sailing vessels, most of which were dismantled or dispersed abroad. Of the limited number of steamers subjected by law, only about two hundred were available at all our naval stations and receiving ships. Many of the officers became disqualified for service in this sudden and feebled condition, without men, or ships, or ordnance, or resources placed at its disposal, the department immediately undertook to establish and enforce the most extensive blockade that was ever undertaken to be effectual against the ports of a nation.

To make available every naval vessel, to recall our foreign squadrons, to increase our force by building at home, by the purchase of vessels for naval purposes, from the merchant service, every steamer which could be made a fighting vessel, to enlarge as much as possible the navy yards, to put in requisition the foundries and workshops of the country for supplies of ordnance and steam machinery, to organize and train the new forces, and supply the deficiency of officers by selecting experienced and able shipmasters and others from the commercial service, to devolve the new, arduous and responsible duties which were precipitated upon the Department at that exciting and interesting period.

The measures promptly and energetically adopted, carried on immense navy to spring into existence, not to carry on a maritime war, for the rebels had no navy to stimulate our sailors to glorious deeds, nobly contending for several months, by steamers, and ships, and ordnance, and supplies were specially collected for the onerous naval duties needful to sustain our national unity and preserve our national rights.

Besides the duty of the extensive blockade of the coast, naval expeditions were organized at the earliest possible period to assert and restore the national authority on the southern waters within the insurrectionary region. The first of these expeditions was organized and sailed from Hampton Roads in August, under the command of Rear Admiral Stringham, and resulted in the capture of Hatteras inlet forts, and the early and important position which was effected on our coast. This was followed a few weeks later by the victory of Rear Admiral Dupont and the fitted over the ship canal commodious harbor for the ships of the South Atlantic squadron. The achievements on the lower Mississippi, the Tennessee, the regular grand dashed open the gates of the passage to New Orleans, and restored to the Union the commercial metropolis of the South. These were accomplished the following spring. Those three important expeditions, comprising in each case a larger fleet than had ever been fitted out on this continent, and two of them seldom surpassed in naval annals, were planned, organized, and carried into execution in the first year of the war, in addition to an immense blockade, which was at the same time so vigilantly enforced as to convince the rebels even then felt and complained of its exhausting severity. Other harbors and places have from time to time been occupied, and the contest, last being the bay of Mobile and the fortifications at its entrance, effected by the same distinguished officer who had planned the capture of New Orleans, the Mississippi to uninterrupted navigation two years before. Not less important in their results, under all the circumstances, involving the integrity of the Union and our national supremacy, been fall upon the rebels in establishing our dominion on the Fort Henry, at Donelson, at Shiloh, at Island No. 10, at Memphis, at Arkansas Post, at Vicksburg, at Port Hudson, and in the subsequent brilliant operations on the Mississippi, the Cumberland, the Tennessee and other rivers of the Southwest, the navy has been the object of the highest military interest and dignity. A fact of more than one hundred vessels had been put afloat upon those waters, and most of them are now patrolling those rivers on national cause.

It has been the policy of this department, rigidly adhered to under all circumstances, and from which it has not allowed itself to be diverted, never to permit a vessel of the navy to be built at private establishments by the side of the national vessels, but to build and equip all vessels in the navy yards. No large squadrons have been maintained on foreign stations. Cruisers of small size only have been sent out or ordered to important points to protect American interests, and capture or destroy the few predatory vessels which from time to time have ventured abroad to depredate on our commerce.

THE BLOCKADE—WILMINGTON.

The blockade of a coast line of three thousand five hundred and forty-nine miles in length, greater in extent than the whole coast of Europe from Cape Trafalgar to Cape North, is an undertaking without precedent in history. During our last war with Great Britain, in which we had only a few hundred naval vessels in commission, not a single port of the United States was thoroughly closed. The most we attempted in early efforts to enforce the blockade.

Military co-operation was secured in the early part of August, and two iron-clads from Charleston, the Palmetto State and the Chicora, with the rebel ram, Rear-Admiral Farragut, at 5:30 o'clock in the morning of the 5th of August, got his fleet under way and entered the bay, passing between Forts Morgan and Gaines, silencing their rebel batteries, encountering the rebel squadron, which, by 10 o'clock, was either captured, sunk or destroyed. This engagement, in many respects one of the most remarkable on record, which added new laurels to the fame of Rear-Admiral Farragut, was not without serious loss on our part. The most serious of them was the destruction of the Tecumseh, one of his most formidable vessels, by a torpedo, early in the action, and the loss of her gallant commander, T. A. M. Craven, and nearly all of her brave officers and crew. It was from the Tecumseh that the first shot was fired at Fort Morgan. The total casualties, not including those of the Tecumseh, were fifty-two killed, and one hundred and seventy-one wounded.

After the capture of one of the rebel gunboats by the Metacomet, and the retreat of two others under the guns of the fort, the iron-clad ram Tennessee, bearing the flag of the rebel Admiral Buchanan, maintained the contest. For a while the action was general, and the wooden vessels and ships gradually encountered the Tennessee, although her armor was impervious to their guns, which bounded from her sides as if from hail. Her powerful antagonist. The Manhattan, with one of her guns which shot broken through the armor of the Tennessee, and soon after established the latter steering gear, and thus rendered her helpless. At 10 o'clock she surrendered. Twenty officers and about one hundred and twenty men were captured in the vessel, and ninety officers and men in the fort. The capture of these two vessels was the retreat of the two remaining rebel gunboats under the guns of Fort Morgan, terminated the glorious day's work of the 5th of August.

On the following day one of the iron-clads shelled Fort Gaines with such effect that Colonel Anderson, the rebel commander, sent a communication to Rear Admiral Farragut offering to surrender. Early the next morning, the other iron-clad was found in a conjoint movement. Neither branch of the service can expect to be successful in an attack upon this powerful position unless the army and navy were the deep water at Wilmington, as at New Orleans, Mobile, and Port Royal, either of these important points could be attacked at that point, but by reason of the shoalness of the water, an exclusively naval operation cannot be relied upon to be successful.

WESTERN GULF SQUADRON—BATTLE IN MOBILE HARBOR.

An object earnestly cherished by the navy, but which had never been made for army operation, was the possession of the bay of Mobile. In anticipation that it would be necessary to capture the city, Admiral Farragut rejoined his squadron in January, but the operation was still further postponed for military demonstrations in Texas and on Red river.

The Bay of Mobile, guarded at its entrance by two formidable forts, Morgan and Gaines, and by two lines of torpedoes, was difficult to blockade, and was one of the principal ports of the Gulf of Mexico. Lieutenant Craven, of the Federal Government in former years, was difficult to blockade, and was one of the principal ports of the Gulf of Mexico. Lieutenant Craven, of Chicago, County of Cook and State of Illinois, has this day filed in the office of the Comptroller of the Currency, in compliance with the requirements of the act of Congress entitled "An act to Provide a National Currency, secured by a pledge of United States bonds and to provide for the circulation and redemption thereof," approved June 3d, 1864, and has deposited the sum of Twenty thousand dollars, required to be complied with before commencing business, and has received the certificate of authority to commence business.

Now, therefore, I, HUGH McCULLOCH, Comptroller of the Currency, do hereby certify that the Northwestern National Bank of Chicago, in the City of Chicago, County of Cook and State of Illinois, is authorized to commence the business of banking, as prescribed by law.

In testimony whereof, witness my hand and seal of office this thirtieth day of August, 1864.

Comptroller of the Currency.

IMPORTANT TO FEMALES

DR. CHEESEMAN'S

FEMALE PILLS.

Women alone known, as I thoroughly appreciate, the peculiar nervous derangements of the female system, and for the relief of which no preparation ever before offered to the public has proved so efficacious as my FEMALE PILLS. Their delicate sensitiveness to any morbific influence, their extreme susceptibility, and consequent suffering from derangements of the functions upon which GENERAL HEALTH and even their own existence depends, render them a class peculiarly entitled to the earnest sympathy of the public, and to the most careful study of the physician.

It was under a full sense of this truth, and with the feeling that existence could have no higher or object than the prevention and amelioration of female suffering, that I commenced, nearly twenty days ago, applying myself diligently to the study of the diseases peculiar to the sex, with a view to the production of a remedy which should be an unfailing specific for each and all of them. SYPHILITIC CURE.

This Medicine is a Safe and Radical Cure for Syphilis in the Primary, Secondary and Tertiary stages, and is the most important Medical Discovery of the Nineteenth Century.

From time immemorial there has existed in all large cities a class of diseases, the result of SEXUAL DEBAUCHERY, which depends upon a special cause, that of a distinct VIRUS, which is capable of transmission by contagion.

DR. MARKS' SYPHILITIC CURE is the only medicine known to the world that will CERTAINLY CURE SYPHILITIC and VENEREAL DISEASES in all their varied and complicated forms, and thoroughly eradicate the disease from the system.

The great success which has attended the skill of our most eminent physicians, and caused MILLIONS to be consigned to PREMATURE GRAVES, or to drag out a miserable existence while infected, is so readily CURED by THIS, ITS ONLY TRUE REMEDY—so say other SIMPLE FORMS of disease.

SYPHILIS is characterized by three distinct STAGES, the symptoms of each stage, and the prices of the medicine per PACKAGE is given, so that persons in the country can order the medicine to suit their means, which is recommended to cure the particular stage of disease with which they are afflicted.

SUPERIOR COURT—TAX DECISION.—An important decision was yesterday delivered by C. J. Hon. J. H. Wilson, in Chancery, in the case entitled Young vs. Ives et al.:

Mrs. Young, the complainant, who is a married woman, was the owner of her own right of certain real estate in Chicago, which was sold for taxes in 1861. The two years allowed by law for redemption from tax sales, expired, and redemption was not made. Afterwards, and during the life of her husband, the complainant sought to avail herself of her right to redeem under the provisions of the statute, which is as follows:

"That the real estate of any infant, femme covert or lunatic be sold for taxes, the same may be redeemed at any time within one year after such disability is removed."

The defendants contested her right to do so. The Court held that the disability—the husband of complainant being still alive—was not yet removed, and that she could not therefore redeem until after the death of her husband, notwithstanding the party holding the tax title would have the benefit of the rents and profits as long as the husband or complainant should live. In other words, she only has one year after her husband's death within which to redeem, and that the cause that had accrued since the tax sale, and the hundred per cent.

The Court held, further, that the recent statute, authorizing married women to control their own real estate, did not apply to this case, for the reason that the rights of the parties had become fixed before the passage of the last act.

James P. Root for complainant; James L. Stark for defendant.

We commend the law on this subject to the attention of our legislators; it strikes us that there is room for improvement.

EVANSTON SANITARY FAIR.—Make all ready for the great Sanitary Fair, given by the Young Ladies of the Northwestern Female College at Evanston this evening. Everybody will be there, and Yates has positively promised to be present, and will deliver an address. Rev. O. B. Tiffany, D. D., and other distinguished speakers will be also on hand. The Evanston Brass Band will furnish its attendance with its spirit stirring music. The ladies have been busy at work for a month past preparing for the event, and have determined to be outdone by none. They have everything made ready on hand and with difficulty against the door of the jail. The shouts and obscene remarks which were uttered as the two upright posts were lifted into their places were bad enough, but they were trifles as compared with the comments which followed the slow efforts of the two laborers to get the crossbeam into its place. At last this was finished, and then, amid such yells as only such sightseers and so disappointed could give vent to, a strong force of police filed in and took their places, doubly lining the enclosure round the drop, right before the foremost of the hungry crowd, who had kept their places through wet and dry, since Sunday night. Then, as every minute, the day broke more and more clear, the crowd could be seen in all the horrible reality in which it had been heard throughout the long, wet night. All the wide space in front of Newgate was packed with masses within the barriers, and kept standing to and fro in little patches, while beyond these again, out to St. Sepulchre's and down towards Ludgate Hill, the mob had gathered and was gathering fast. Among the throng were very few women; and even these were generally of the lowest class, and almost as depraved in behavior as their few better-dressed exceptions. The rest of the crowd was, as a rule, made up of young men; but such young men as only such a scene could bring together—sharpers, thieves, gamblers, betting men, the outsiders of the boxing ring, bricklayers' laborers, dock workmen, German artizans and sugar bakers, with a fair sprinkling of what may be almost called as low a grade as any of the worst that is met—the rakings of cheap singing-halls and billiard rooms, the fast young "gents" of London. None but those who have seen it can form any idea of the horrible, brutalizing character of the scene. The crowd, as it waited, fought and struggled for places, and fought with a ferocity that made them all akin. Until about three o'clock not more than four thousand, or five thousand, were there assembled, and over all the rest of the wide space the white unoccupied barriers showed up like a network of houses above the mud. But from that time forward and throughout the last barriers after the scaffold had been carried to the debtors' door, and from that time the throng was numberless.

DISGRACEFUL CONDUCT OF THE ASSEMBLED MULTITUDE.

Worse in conduct it could not be, though still night had fallen upon it. None can be tempted to preach in the midst of the crowd, but his voice was soon drowned amid much laughter. Then there was another lull, not, indeed, of quiet, but at least a lull from any pre-eminent attempt at noise, though every now and then it was broken by that inexplicable sound like a dull blow, followed, as before, always by laughing, sometimes by fighting. Then, again, another more stronger in voice and more convenient with those he had to plead before, began the old familiar hymn of "The Promised Land." For a little time this man sang alone, and at last he was joined by a few others, when another and apparently more popular voice gave out some couplet in which at once, and as if by magic, the crowd joined, with the chorus of—

"Oh my!
I think I've got to die."

Till this again was superseded by the song of—

"Muller, Muller,
He's the man."

All these vocal efforts, however, were cut short by the dull, rumbling sound which, amid cheers, shouts, whooping, clapping of hands, hisses, and cries of "Why wasn't it brought out five minutes sooner?" announced the arrival of the dirty old gallows. This was for the time a great diversion, and the crowd thronged out for it as if it had come for the first time. Then, while the horses were removed and the lumbering black box was worked back slowly and with difficulty against the door of the jail. The shouts and obscene remarks which were uttered as the two upright posts were lifted into their places were bad enough, but they were trifles as compared with the comments which followed the slow efforts of the two laborers to get the crossbeam into its place. At last this was finished, and then, amid such yells as only such sightseers and so disappointed could give vent to, a strong force of police filed in and took their places, doubly lining the enclosure round the drop, right before the foremost of the hungry crowd, who had kept their places through wet and dry, since Sunday night.
